Dwayne King, Kingdom Air Corps

Dwayne founded Kingdom Air Corps in 1999 with a purpose and a passion to train pilots and aviation mechanics to use airplanes to deliver the gospel to the remote places in the world unreachable by road.

Currently, 10 full time missionaries are serving in Alaska, and Thailand with a view toward expansion into India and the middle east. Students come from across the United States, including a large group from LeTourneau University's aviation program, as well as international students who train at Kingdom Air Corps, then return to their own countries to serve the Lord as missionary pilots.

FROM MY HEART...

Former UCLA basketball coach John Wooden, called the "Wizard of Westwood," lived to be almost 100, was once asked his opinion of Texas Tech (and former Indiana) coach Bobby Knight. Wooden would only respond, "I think Bob Knight is an outstanding teacher of the game of basketball, but I don't approve of his methods. But I'm not a judge, and I'm not judging Bob Knight. There is so much bad in the best of us and so much good in the worst of us, it hardly behooves me to talk about the rest of us."

I think he understands what Henry Kaiser once said, "When your work speaks for itself, don't interrupt."

Wooden has shown us what a legend looks like. He not only was a gentleman on the court, he holds records that may never be broken. His 10 national championships, his 88 game winning streak, his phenomenal winning percentage, the players he groomed for stardom in the NBA -- this is his legacy; he has no reason to add the title of "outspoken critic" to the list.

In our life, whether we be at work, at school, or even at play, there are always potential (and some rightly so) targets of our own criticism. If we're not careful, they can take up all of our time. If we're not careful, we can be sidetracked into thinking our opinions are more important than our actions.

It's what we do that ultimately makes a difference. Talk isn't enough. In fact, talk is cheap. Opinions aren't enough. Criticism, no matter how on-target or well-articulated it might be, isn't enough. You prove who you are by the way that you live.

Paul asked, "So why do you condemn another Christian? Why do you look down on another Christian? Remember, each of us will stand personally before the judgment seat of God." (Romans 14:10)

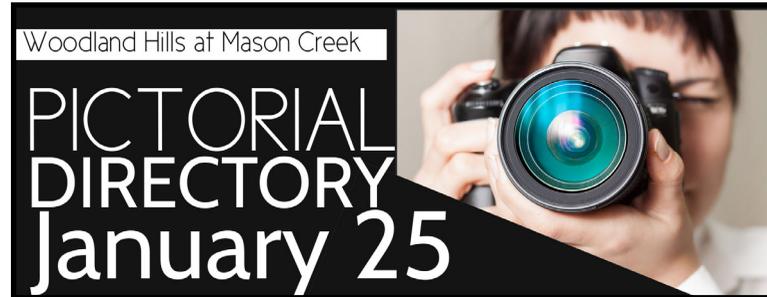

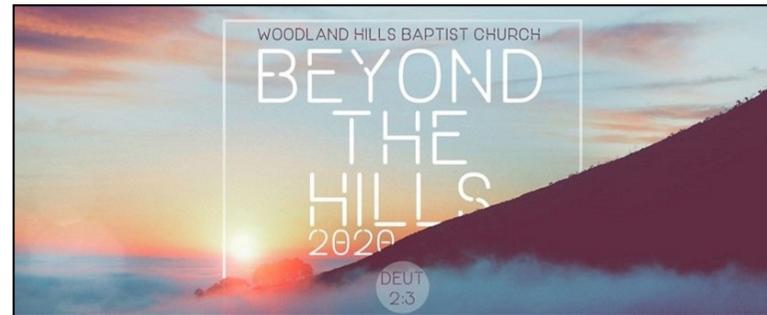

Wooden also had another amazing statement he quoted often..."Do not let what you cannot do interfere with what you can do."

Let's strive toward leaving a legacy, not upon our estimation of others, but upon our own measurable accomplishments. Criticize less, do more. That's what a legend looks like. There's plenty to do in 2021. Let's not curse the darkness, let's share the light!
