Welcome Tonight Bro. Dwayne King
Main Campus at 6pm

In 1999, Dwayne King and his son David carved a runway from the bush marking the beginning of a vision Dwayne had for missionary pilot training. Having flown extensively in Alaska and Far East Russia for more than 30 years, he realized the necessity of the use of aircraft to reach the hundreds of towns and villages in these regions.

From My Heart..

Thanks for being here to study and worship with us today. It's hard to believe, but January is almost over! I'm praying that God will meet your needs, whatever they are on this special day!

Elbert Hubbard said: "To avoid criticism, do nothing, say nothing, be nothing." For those called to do kingdom work, this just isn't an option. We'll all be criticized. We just need to learn how to deal with it.

A good example of enduring criticism can be seen in David. The Philistine, Goliath stood before the Israelite army, defying them day after day to defeat him in battle. No one believed he could be conquered. King Saul and the Israelites were "dismayed and shaken." But David, a red-headed, ruddy-looking teenager got the idea that he, by God's power, could slay this giant. When he began talking about it, his brother Eliab spoke with burning anger: "Why have you come down here? And with whom did you leave those few sheep in the desert? I know how conceited you are and how wicked your heart is; you came down only to watch the battle." (1 Samuel 17:28)

David's brother epitomizes the nature of critics. Here's how:

He was obsessed with the trivial. David was about to win a mighty battle for the glory of God, but Eliab was more concerned with the sheep. Critics usually focus on the little picture, not the big picture.

He made it personal. Eliab called David "conceited and wicked." This reveals the difference between criticism and advice. An advisor helps you evaluate your options and rethink your strategy. A critic just attacks your motives and condemns your character.

He underestimated David's intentions. He said, "You came down here to watch the battle." No, David came to win the battle. He came to save the day. He was willing to do what Eliab and the rest of the army weren't: he was ready to risk his life for the opportunity to do something great for the glory of God. Eliab didn't get that.

So what was David's response? He simply said, "Now what have I done? Can't I even speak?" And here's the part to notice..."He then turned away to someone else and brought up the same matter." (1 Sam 17:29-30) David didn't get into a debate with his big brother about his motives or his vision. He didn't explain the arrangements for the sheep. He turned away from his critical brother and talked to someone else. The best response to criticism is to ignore it, to turn away from it, and to keep thinking about how you can do what God has called you to do.
